Acknowledgements

The completion of this thesis marks the culmination of several years of learning, experimenting, and persevering through challenges. I am deeply grateful to all those who have supported me, directly or indirectly, throughout this journey.

First and foremost, I extend my heartfelt gratitude to my supervisor, Dr. Sanjukta Ghosh, whose tremendous support, guidance, and encouragement have been instrumental in every step of this thesis. Her inspiration is the cause behind the successful completion of this Thesis work. I am grateful to my RPEC examiners, Dr. Anil Thakur and Dr. V. Ramanathan for their constructive comments, insightful suggestions and good-humoured criticism. Their valuable insights have significantly influenced the quality of my work, and I am truly thankful for their mentorship.

I extend my sincere gratitude to Mr. Vijai Kumar Singh, former Director of the National School of Drama (TIE wing) Tripura, and Mr. Dipendra Rawat, a distinguished practitioner of process drama, for their invaluable contribution in introducing me to the field of Drama in Education. Their continuous guidance and practical insights have enriched my understanding and practice of process drama, enhancing the quality of my work.

I sincerely thank Prof. R.K Mishra, Department of Electrical Engineering, and former Head of the Department of Humanistic Studies, and Dr. A. K. Mishra, current Head of the Department of Humanistic Studies, for their continuous support, encouragement, and valuable advice throughout my doctoral journey. Additionally, I extend my regard to the Institute Director, the professors, DPGC Convenors, Deans, office staff, and housekeeping staff, especially Mr. Ajay Kannoja of the Department of Humanistic Studies, Indian Institute of Technology (BHU) Varanasi, India, for their support and assistance.

I express my heartfelt appreciation to Mr. Vibhanshu Verma, Mr. Rakesh Kr. Pankaj, and Dr. Vandana Dwivedi for their consistent support, both academically and personally, throughout my life journey. My deepest appreciation goes to my family for their unconditional support and understanding. I am immensely grateful to my parents, siblings, and my wife for their patience and for making this journey both rewarding and fulfilling.

Lastly, I dedicate this thesis to my teachers, whose guidance and encouragement laid the foundation for my academic journey.
